THE advocates of the BURNSIDE-BAN-NING army bill are dejected by a rumor that Senator DAVIS proposes to "sit down "upon it," because some of its provisions are unconstitutional. It is to be hoped this catastrophe may be averted. The poor little thing-big only in private jobs and personal spites-is flat enough already.

AMERICUS VESPUCIUS RICE is a great ceded him in evolving the arrears of pensions bill. Plainly speaking, Mr. RICE has which he is dolorously inclined to do.

THE POTTER Committee will go down to history as the most successful organizawickedness.

THE Georgians are boasting over the fact that State unable to read or write has decreased from 186,244 to 85,630. 'The public schools have been practically abolished under Democratic rule, it is true; but the laws do not prohibit the "niggers" from learning to read, write, and cipher, while the "poor "whites" have the same chance now they always had.

The Arrears of Pensions Bill.

Washisoron, D. C., Jan. 17, 1879. To the Editor of the National Republican: Sin: I observe in to day's Post that Mr. Rice, of Ohio, is reported in an interview as being very happy because the Senate yesterday passed House bill 4231, granting arrears of pensions. To show Blice's record in this arrears of pension matter. On the 18th of February, 1678, Mr. Rice, from the Invalid Pension Committee, reported House bill Invalid Pension Committee, reported House bill 225s. Let use give a synapsis of this bill. This shows what kind of a bill Mr. Rice wants.

The first section grant arrears substantially the same as the bill which passed both Houses.

The second section provides if applications for pensions on account of wounds or injuries were or are not filed within five years after the right account the date of the commence at the development of the distribution; but if filed within five years, then from the date of discharge.

The third section gives the same relief in cases of discuss contracted in the service.

The fairth section cannot that the arrears of pension shall be at the rate granted in original certificate.
